

Zach Edey 7'4 Center Purdue vs. Gonzaga 11/25/22

Offensively Zach is way bigger than his competition, but he has a soft touch with the ball and knows how to finish. He does a good job posting up as well as sealing off defenders when trying to get the ball. He excels in P/R situations and does a good job eating up space while letting his teammates know where he is in the paint. He isn't the best free thrower shooter, but I would say he can knock them down occasionally. Lastly, I think he takes a long time to get his shots up, after receiving a dump-off pass or getting a rebound he takes a couple of seconds before putting his shot up. Forced the double team when posting up against Zaga

Defensively he got 3 blocks, but he has slow feet and people make too many shots over him. He does a good job staying vertical, but he could get more blocks or just have a stronger defensive presence.

As we know Edey is an inside dominant big, who with his size could be averaging 15 and 15 easily, I would like to see him grabbing more rebounds since he isn't playing any more than maybe 18 feet from the basket. When he is down in the paint it's like the ball falls right into his hands, but he still isn't grabbing an impressive amount of rebounds
