

Stephon Castle vs DePaul 02/14/24 – In Person

Good size for the guard spot. He has long arms and his frame looks like it will be able to add muscle as time progresses.

He was not a threat shooting the ball. He made his presence felt in transition, running the floor and using euro steps to change his pace and score at the rim. He showed hustle on the offensive glass as well, coming up with some offensive rebounds. When attacking downhill, his athleticism shined when putting pressure on the rim.

Defensively, he displayed good strength playing through contact on screens and using his strength to contain drives to the rim. He was sometimes caught looking off of the ball, allowing for some easy shots from his opponent.

Offensively, he was limited outside of transition for the most part. Defensively, he showed good promise when defending on the ball.
